the collegians been opposed by the full strength of the regimental club there is little doubt that they would have been

Lawrence Rice and Edward L. Hopkins of Yale had to go three sets to win from Abraham Bassford 3d and Travers Le Gros, a schoolboy team, at 4—5, 6—2.

It had been expected that Walter Merrill Hall and Arthur S. Cragin, the best of the Seventh Regiment Club players, would be on the home team, but they failed to make their appearance. Hall in particular, who was the star of matches with Yale in past years, appears to have lost interest in the Seventh Regiment Club. He defaulted the club championship only a couple of weeks ago, preferring to play an exhibition in Brooklyn.

McAllister Presses Garland.

As a result of the absence of Hall and Cragin the leadership of the regimental rees fell to McAllister and Cunning ham. McAllister was pitted against Garland in the star match in singles, and while the young Eli triumphed at 6-3, 8-6, McAllister gave him a hard battle all the way. McAllister used a deceptive cut service that had Garland metha and his deep drive was on the run, and his deep drive was of the season's intercity team matches strong too. But McAllister's backhand was off color and Garland came in to volley it off into aces for himself. running a rather poor second. Cunning-ham could not get his drives working and could not handle the Yale man's service. In the second set Cunningham got the gauge of his opponent's style and left him hitched to a post. Le Gros used a strong service and worked his long drives to perfection against Hopkins, who is rated as quite a singles player. Young Bassford was no match for Rice, who scored in straight sets, with the loss of only five games, the count being 6-3, 6-2. The March 29.

The feature match of the competition, which was productive of an upset, was that in which Edward K. Van Winkle, the lanky champion of the home club, was defeated with ease by B. C. Larrabee, the Caines Club titleholder. The match went only two short games, with the score at 15—5, 15—5.

Larrabee used a remarkably deceptive and sharp service. Some of the experts declared at times this service encroached on the rules, which provide that in serving the racquet must not be swing above the elbow. They also declared that on account of the severity of that form of service it had been discarded by the home players. However, they will have to brush it up and take it out of retirement if they want to win from the Bostonians next month. The Larrabee service gave Van Winkle no Stymie. REVIVIFIED DE ORO JOLTS OSLER IDEA

Veteran Cueist, Nearing 60 Wrests Billiard Title From Skilled Youth.

OTHER SENIORS EXCELLED

Vignaux, Daly, Slosson and Elder Schaefer Won When Past Fifty.

The fact of Alfredo de Ore at 55 years of age regaining the three cushion billiand title that had been wrested from him by August Kleckhefer a year ago empha-sizes the fact that age is no bar to the playing of championship billiards. This is another rebuff to Dr. Osler and his theory that a man is uscless after pas-ing 40 and might as well be chloreformed.

Although De Oro has been an active billiard expert for nearly thirty years and was supposed to have retrogressed he suddenly displayed a skill that overwhelmed a youth generally regarded as the greatest champion the angle game ever has known. Not only did De Oro win the match and recover the emblem, but he played some remarkable billiards. He scored 50 points in 35 innings which is quite a feat at three cushions, and finished his entire quota of 150 points in 145 innings.

This feat by the veteran is all the more assonishing because of the physical line when the second secon

This feat by the veteran is all the more asonishing because of the physical ills that he has suffered at frequent intervals. Intestinal trouble has compelled De Oro to submit to a series of serious surgical operations and while he always has emerged with obaracteristic counage and grit there cannot be any doubt that his vitality suffered.

De Oro is not the only billiard expert who has performed with remarkable skill after passing his fortieth year. Maurice Vignaux, the famous French player, held the championship at 18.1 after he had keen rival."

It doubtless is true that Hoppe and Benjamin would like to have Sutton generally regarded as the only player deserving of championship the present title holder for the very good reason that Hoppe is a certain winner in any contest with the Canadian.

It begins to look as though Hoppe would, at the completion of his tour, ac-cept a challenge from Sutton for a title match, the result of which would be a
